For Immediate Release

Mouser to Showcase Newest Technologies at the International Microwave Symposium 2014

June 2, 2014 – Mouser Electronics, Inc., a leading engineering resource and global distributor of semiconductors and electronic components, today announced that it will be a Key Partner of the International Microwave Symposium 2014 (IMS2014), set for June 1-6 at the Tampa Bay Florida Convention Center. IMS2014 is the premier international conference for technologists involved in all aspects of microwave theory and practice.

In the exhibits hall, Mouser representatives will host a large display at Booth 1851, showcasing some of the newest RF technologies from Analog Devices, Infineon Technologies, Murata Wireless, and other leading suppliers, all available for same-day shipping through Mouser.com. IMS2014 will offer technical sessions, interactive forums, plenary and panel sessions, workshops, short courses, industrial exhibits, application seminars, historical exhibits and a wide array of other interactive technical and social activities.

Mouser also is a Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) Program Supporting Sponsor at the symposium. For many years Mouser has been a strong supporter of STEM in schools across the nation. A variety of student events and competitions are scheduled for the symposium, including student paper competitions and many other interesting design contests.

Besides the flagship IMS Conference, Microwave Week also hosts the IEEE RFIC, ARFTG and WAMICON conferences. Attendees will experience invaluable opportunities to learn, share and connect with application engineers, product experts, peers, media, analysts and other leaders in the industry.
